

"The staff members seem to take a genuine interest in my child. She is warmly welcomed every day by the teachers, and my child responds to them very well. My child is extremely comfortable around all of the teachers and trusts them."

"I walk out of the center every day and feel that my child is loved and well cared for there, sometimes better than at home. He feels comfortable and secure in his present class with his present teacher. I am extremely pleased with the staff members. One thing that sticks in my mind is that not only the immediate teachers know his name and greet him, but so do the director, assistants and cafeteria and cleaning personnel, [they] are just as caring and sincere."

Comments from two LLF Parents

We're a special family

The Lewis Little Folks family is special because it includes so many caring people: a dedicated staff, interested parents and our many supportive friends at NASA Glenn Research Center. Of course, the “little folks” are the focus of our family efforts, and our goal is to provide a nurturing environment for them which foster self-esteem, social development, learning and creativity.

The idea for an on-site center started with a group of NASA parents who were concerned about obtaining quality childcare for their children. With the support of several other Glenn personnel, the idea became a reality, and Lewis Little Folks, Inc. Child Development Center opened its doors in 1985. In 1993 the facility was updated and expanded, and in 2004 we moved into a brand new facility.

Today parents continue to play a very important role in making our center a special place. Whether through participating in extracurricular activities, fundraisers, or fulfilling a very important role as a board member, Lewis Little Folks encourages parents to be actively involved in their child's development experience. Because of our on-site location, parents can easily participate in activities at the center. Many parents join us for lunch!

We believe that quality childcare results when concerned, supportive parents work with a competent and caring staff to provide positive early childhood experiences that will promote growth and development.
